Local art galleries rolling out the mixed media

Grossmont College Hyde Gallery's combined presentation of photographs and landform paintings of artists Carlos Richardson and Merryl Berner Cicourel can be viewed from Monday through Dec. 13 at 8800 Grossmont College Dr. in El Cajon.

The gallery's hours are Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m. - 2 p.m. Friday, 11 a.m. - 2 p.m. and Wednesday from 7 - 8:30 p.m.

On view in the Hyde Gallery are Carlos Richardson's works in Palladium/Platinum process, Iris prints and traditional silver prints of landscape, portrait and stilllife.

Born in San Diego and trained at Yale, Richardson returned to San Diego 15 years ago. While his work, produced both in California and in Vermont has connections to the West coast tradition of landscape, the exquisite detailed surface and tonal quality of his prints transcend nature through the texture and color inherent in his chosen processes. This emphasized surface quality and serene, contemplative subject-matter produce images that seem ageless, free-floating in time.

Merryl Berner Cicourel's landform-inspired paintings are on view in the Annex Gallery space. Cicourel has shown extensively in San Diego. Her work was included in the 1985 La Jolla Contemporary Art Museum "Emerging Artists" show, and has exhibited in Los Angeles, Chicago and Spain.

Her work, visual constructions like the metaphors of daily language, use figuration, abstraction and manipulated color invokes the landscapes, cultures, spiritual imagery and visual traditions of other cultures.

In this exhibit of imaginative reconstruction, Cicourel is using the monotype process, often directly reworking the images with repeated pressings, and drawing with oils into the finished impressions, emphasizing line, color and shape, depth, scale and space.

A reception for the artists will be held from 7 - 9 p.m. on Tuesday. Admission is free and the public is encouraged to attend. For more information, call 465-1700 and request tape #8092.

Bernard Galleries

Bernard Galleries will present an art exhibition from 6 - 9 p.m. on Nov. 22 and from 1 - 3 p.m. on Nov. 23 for Lee Kromschroeder and Randy Scott, both nationally-known artists. The gallery is located at 8363 Center Dr. in La Mesa.

Kromschroeder is recognized throughout the United States and Canada for his photo-realistic images of wildlife in their natural environment.

Scott's art is currently shown throughout the United States and is known for his renditions of mammals in their underwater habitat.

Both Kromschroeder and Scott will be featuring new originals and prints, and will be available to personalize their art.

The exhibit will run through Dec. 31. For further information call Leon Rubio at 460-4544.

La Vae Gallery

Starting on Saturday and continuing through Nov. 30 a group of San Diego County artists will reveal their unique expressions through a variety of subjects and media with the exhibit, "New Visions '96" at La Vae Gallery, 4703 Spring Street in La Mesa.

Gallery hours are 10 a.m. - 5 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday.

A reception for the artists is being held from 6 - 8 p.m. on Saturday at the gallery which is located in the village of La Mesa on the corner of Lemon Avenue and Spring Street.

Artists who will be exhibiting their work are: Lisbeth Anderson, Jeanne Auger, Alyce Buckner-Cosart, John Engen, Shirley Hesch, Venus Macpherson, Charles Martin, Chris Martino, Dawn Adriane Peters, Stefanatz, Kay Stinger, Marie Claire Toulmonde, and Andres Zapata.

For further information call Nona Powers at 463-5858.

Marisa Sadler crowned Miss East County

by Greg Eichelberger

Marisa Sadler, 20, of El Cajon, became the first winner of the Miss East San Diego County Scholarship Pageant, which was held at the East County Performing Arts Center on Sunday evening as a joint event with the Miss San Diego County competition. The pageants are official preliminaries for the Miss California/Miss America Program.

The theme to the event was "A Star-Spangled Salute to The USO," and featured patriotic musical numbers and even some U.S. Marines participating in some of the on-stage presentations.

The reigning Miss El Cajon (the daughter of Jerry and Stephanie Sadler), was joined in the winner's circle by Elisa Kricki of Del Mar, who captured the Miss San Diego crown (held by Crystal Allard). They will spend the next six months preparing for the next step - the Miss California contest in Fresno next June.

A victory there will send one of them to the Miss America Pageant, which takes place in September 1997 in Atlantic City.

Impressing the judges with her talent - a jazz dance number, stage presence and her impromptu answer on the subject of middle school illiteracy, Sadler, who was breathless and exuberant after the decision, edged out Cynthia Voces, a 22-year-old student at Grossmont College who hails from National City.

"I feel wonderful," said the student at San Diego State University, who is studying education. "I worked so hard for this and can't believe it."

"I'll be working with everybody for the next few months, including Dee Dudley (of Lakeside), her personal trainer, preparing mentally and physically to get ready for Fresno."

Sadler and Kricki, who attends UCSD, will each receive a $500 scholarship from the Miss San Diego County Program Fund, a $600 scholarship from the Miss California Fund and all-expenses-paid evening at the Pacific Terrace Inn. They will also have the opportunity to represent San Diego in the state competition, which is probably the biggest prize of all.

"It's a great feeling to know that Marisa and I will be able to show the rest of California what San Diego has to offer," said Kricki.

Under the direction of Lakeside's Billie Sangster, the double pageant came off without a hitch, as even the technical problems so prevalent in these events, were kept to a bare minimum.

"I'm proud to have an El Cajon girl in there (the Miss California Pageant)," said local attorney, George Bye, who, with his wife Mary, has been involved in these affairs since 1974.

The last (and only) time a Miss San Diego won the Miss California title was in 1950, when the late Joanne Durant wore the crown.

Sangster, who was also recently elected to the Riverview Water Board, was pleased with the results of this inaugural pageant.

"I'm happy with the way things turned out," she said. She commented that her feet hurt. She added her thanks to all of her volunteers and everyone else who were a great help.

The other East County competitors Katherine Hallock, a former Miss Lakeside; Kimberly Scott; Vanessa Dunn, of Lakeside; and Julie Huff.

The judges included Vanabeth Trout, Russ Gladden, Marilyn Ross Schwadron, James Barone, Gail Powell-Davis and Mary Bye, while the current Miss California, Lyndsay Kahler, added a special rendition of "I'll Be Seeing You."

'Turbo Man' to appear at Grossmont Center

Turbo Man, the action figure star from Arnold Schwarzenegger's new film "Jingle All The Way," will make an appearance from 11 a.m. - 1 p.m. on Sunday at Grossmont Center, 5500 Grossmont Center Dr. in La Mesa.

Star 100.7 will also be on hand help start the Christmas celebrations.

Kids can have their pictures taken with Turbo Man, parents can have their early holiday gifts wrapped for free in "Jingle All The Way" wrapping paper, and there will be chances to win tickets to the San Diego premiere, as well as other surprise giveaways.

"Jingle All The Way" is an upcoming release from 20th Century Fox and stars Schwarzenegger, Sinbad and introducing the toy of the season, Turbo Man.

From the makers of "Home Alone" and "Mrs. Doubtfire," Schwarzenegger stars as a father who promises his young son that he will deliver without fail the number one item on the boy's wish list.

This neglectful but well-meaning father's Christmas Eve turns into a hilariously nightmarish, madcap scramble across the city to find the much sought after and nearly impossible to find toy!

B Words

by Bob Burns

We'd be proud to wear a badge

There is a line from the old movie "Treasure of Sierra Madre," that goes "We don't need no stinkin' badges." It applies to the members of the R.S.V.P. (Lemon Grove 61 Victor 71) Senior Patrol that is very near the end of their third year of service to the community. We (I am one of them) certainly do not need more embellishments to our uniforms to do our jobs. Some of our members even eschew letting it be known that we would like to have a shiny badge to proudly wear.

However, in many of the similar organizations that have followed the lead of the Sheriff's program, they do proudly wear badges that are presented to them upon graduation from their respective academies. Sooo, why not the same with us?

Forget the idea that such would be misused. It has not been in the other volunteer programs and certainly would not be abused here. Forget the brandishing or the invidious display of the badges by our group, because it just would not happen. If there be envy on anyone's part, then they would be welcomed into our ranks for sure. The R.S.V.P., to a person, do not want to be cops or anything other than what they are. Volunteers, who desire to lighten the load of our overworked police by doing the mundane and time consuming little tasks of the Dept.

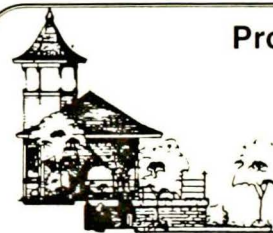

It should be remembered, however, that these individuals do not get salaries of any kind. They very willingly work shifts as they are assigned and often labor as vigorously as those much younger do in similar situations. Extra uniforms and equipment, as well as personal mileage, are paid for by the volunteers in the spirit of doing a better job.

It should also be remembered that the value of what they do to the community can be computed in many hard dollars. The suppression of crime by the police being able to concentrate on its more serious aspects, is a big plus. The mere presence of the patrol meandering through our neighborhoods has a tangible dampening effect on crime. Vacation checks and code violations reporting are making our city safer. Handicapped parking violations are almost non-existent now that those miscreants are ticketed by the R.S.V.P. Graffiti has diminished markedly with the Senior Patrol reporting it as soon as it is applied.

What this all means, in my opinion, is that the City of Lemon Grove could (should) well appreciate what the Senior Patrol is doing in their quiet way. For a few dollars, they could show that appreciation by popping for a few, not "stinking" but shining badges for the group. There seems to be sufficient funds for consultant cost overruns, and neighborhood cleanups which are certainly justified. The very few dollars that the city has given to support the R.S.V.P. program is, in my estimation, an embarrassment when placed viz a viz with value received in return.

How about it Mayor Mary? I am asking this because our members are too proud to make the request, but I know they would all wear a badge proudly.

Kindergarten

by Phillip Giannangeli

Robert Fulghum was one smart cookie. He maintains that he learned everything he needed to know in life while he was in kindergarten. Then he wrote a book about it and convinced many others that they too learned most of the important lessons in life at that early age. I, unfortunately, am a bit slower when it comes to making such discoveries. It took me many years after my kindergarten stint to learn a lot of the things that are necessary to survive (or just get by) in today's world.

One of the first lessons I didn't learn in kindergarten was a simple one. Unfortunately, it's taken me decades to fully comprehend it. That unlearned lesson: the female is the smarter of the two known species. It was thus in kindergarten and it shall be thus ever after. When little Katie could recite the alphabet in about twenty seconds flat while I was tripping all over the exact order of j-k-l-m-n, I should have suspected something. And while I was wondering how water bugs could roll up into such tiny little balls, she was discussing ways to make the planet a better place to live. That should have been the clincher that girls were smarter than boys. Not for me it wasn't and there was similar evidence that went right over my head.

Katie and the other girls in class were much better at numbers than most of us boys were. For us, numbers were OK as long as they were like first and third, two out, and a count of three and two. The girls, on the other hand, could recite numbers that ranged all the way to the stratosphere (a place, by the way, I had only heard about in passing and was oblivious as to what or where) and they knew mysterious things like five, 10, 15, 20, 25. I, with my male kindergarten smugness, thought it all a complete waste of time. What anybody really had to know was that a third strike did you in, and ball four took you off the hook. Who would ever need to know that 50 came right after 49?

Years after the 49-to-50 mastery came to me, I am still attempting to cope with this disparity in intelligence. My struggle has made me realize just how much grief I could have avoided had I but made my discovery in the same setting that Fulghum made his. Unfortunately, I first took the path of oblivion, then confrontation, only to finally acquiesce in acceptance. I could have avoided a lot of unsuccessful intellectual skirmishes (for which I was not properly equipped) had I pulled a Fulghum.

Kindergarten should have also taught me that girls were more civil than boys — at that age and all the way into the great beyond. Girls in kindergarten didn't taunt boys with mean jibes and they rarely tried to put gum in a boy's hair. The latter may have had something to do with the fact that most of the boys in my kindergarten class had buzz jobs but I'm still inclined to think civility rather than hair length played a major role in that behavior.

Another valuable lesson that I didn't pick up on until years later involved the relative worth of people. I knew that Mrs. Richardson, our kindergarten teacher, was nice and I was pretty sure she was one of the smartest people in the world. Somehow though, other adults at the school seemed to get more respect from the parents, the community, and even some of the students. Since then, however, I have learned the lesson that was staring me right in the face in kindergarten. That lesson: who counts. Mrs. Richardson made a difference; I didn't even remember the names of any of those other people.

Robert Fulghum is indeed a very clever fellow. He got a whole book out of his kindergarten experience. All I got was a 600-word column. And I'm still muddled up in stuff I should have learned in kindergarten.

Commentary

by Paul Treske

There are certain stories that should remain with us and not gradually disappear from the news. They should stay because they are graphic reminders of evils that must be rooted out of our lives if we are to ever achieve the real American dream of equal opportunity. Such a story is that of the racist Texaco executives, and it is unfortunately, slowly being relegated to three-inch columns on our newspapers' back pages.

For those who live in such isolation that they neither read nor watch the news, the story is this: Several Texaco executives, during a discussion on minority hiring practices, used highly derogatory and racist language in characterizing African Americans. They then casually discussed "cleaning up" the meeting's minutes before submission. In the course of their discussion they referred to African Americans as "black jelly beans" and used the word "nigger" in demeaning the Black's Kwanzaa celebration. In stating that "I'm having enough trouble with Chanukah, now we have Kwanzaa ... (expletive) niggers, they (expletive) all over us with this," one of the men certainly indicated some degree of anti-Semitism as well.

One of the discussants recorded the proceedings on a hidden pocket tape recorder. When he was later "down-sized," he released the tape to an employee group involved in a class-action suit against the company for biased personnel practices.

Texaco has apologized to the public and suspended two of the executives involved, and with that the news sources seem to have decided that the story is now old stuff. The only form in which it still reaches the daily papers is a minuscule report on Jesse Jackson's efforts to lead a boycott against the company. Otherwise, it is gone and unfortunately soon to be relegated to the category of "well, that's the way things are."

First and foremost, the story gives the lie to the recent ending of Affirmative Action in California. San Diego's Rev. George Walker Smith said it best when he noted that "Proponents of 209 talk about a color blind society. Texaco has proven there is no such thing."

Now I expect similar executives in other companies will piously declare that they hire on merit alone with no racial or gender bias, while attitudes such as those of Texaco will continue to discriminate against the "black jelly beans," the Chanukah celebrators or women. Only by not allowing stories like Texaco's to fade away, can we keep the fire to the feet of companies whose inborn instincts are to ban potential employees due to bias and prejudice.

We were lucky to find out about Texaco. Without that pocket tape recorder, no one would have ever known because the report would have been judiciously cleaned up.

We no longer have Affirmative Action because its opponents succeeded with the argument that it was no longer needed. Texaco has proven that it is needed as much as ever. Even if the news media has moved on to other things, let those of us who care continue to remember and remind our neighbors. This is a battle we dare not lose.

Although Texaco has subsequently stated that a recording test has shown that the word "nigger" was not used, this does little to mitigate the overt racism inherent in the situation. — PT

Reel Thoughts

Shakespeare having a celluloid revival

by Betty Jo Tucker

Teachers of English Literature everywhere should be pleased about three new movie releases inspired by the works of William Shakespeare. If their students see "Looking for Richard," "Romeo and Juliet" and "Twelfth Night," they will learn a great deal more about three of the Bard's most famous plays than by listening to lectures or attending traditional presentations.

While "Looking for Richard," Al Pacino's remarkable documentary about the demonic Richard III, is the most scholarly of the films, it is also the most entertaining. Through interviews with ordinary people on the street as well as with noted Shakespearean actors Kenneth Branagh, James Earl Jones, Vanessa Redgrave, Kevin Kline, and John Gielgud, writer/director Pacino explores the motivation of each character in the play. In addition, he shows dynamic rehearsal scenes of the actors playing in his own film version intermingled with scenes from the actual film.

This masterpiece of editing helps sustain the excitement created by cast members Alec Baldwin as Clarence, Kevin Spacey as Buckingham, Winona Ryder as Lady Anne, Kevin Conway as Hastings, and Pacino himself as the evil Richard. A labor of love for Pacino, "Looking for Richard" turns out to be one of the best movies of the year. Even if you don't usually enjoy Shakespeare, you should see this terrific film.

"Romeo and Juliet" (from 20th Century Fox) provides a very different experience for moviegoers. This visually attractive film updates the romantic tale of star-crossed lovers by using a modern setting and substituting elaborately decorated guns for swords. MTV followers will be turned on to the movie's frenetic pacing and electronic images, while others may be put off by its unusual cinematic style.

As directed by Baz Luhrmann ("Strictly Ballroom"), "Romeo and Juliet" stays true to Shakespeare's dialogue and features excellent performances by Claire Danes as Juliet and Diane Venora as her mother. On the other hand, Leonardo DiCaprio seems miscast as Romeo. (Wherefore art thou, young actor who could do justice to this role?

Claire Danes and Leonardo DiCaprio are Romeo and Juliet.

Only Jonnie Lee Miller of "Hackers" and "Trainspotting" comes to mind.) DiCaprio's work reminds me of Richard Beymer in "West Side Story," the popular musical based on "Romeo and Juliet." Although both were wrong for the Romeo role, neither actor succeeds in ruining the poignancy of this classic tragedy.

Shakespeare's flair for farce as well as tragedy comes through loud and clear in Finline Features' "Twelfth Night." Director Trevor Nunn, former associate director of England's Royal Shakespeare Theatre, sets this gender-bending comedy in the 1890s, an age he believes to be "closer to the social and historic grasp of today's audience."

An exceptionally talented cast including Ben Kingsley ("Gandhi"), Helena Bonham Carter ("Mighty Aphrodite"), Imogen Stubbs ("Sense and Sensibility") and Nigel Hawthorne ("The Madness of King George") brings this outrageous story of mistaken sexual identity to life on the big screen. An added bonus: Kingsley, who once planned on becoming a rock musician, sings a few ditties with no dubbing. (He's quite good!)

As a former high school English teacher, I happily recommend these three new films not just for teenagers, but also for adults interested in new approaches to the classics.

Cancer Society to sponsor Great American Smokeout

Local healthcare providers will show their support for the Great American Smokeout on Nov. 21 by offering help ranging from distributing brochures to providing t-shirts to newborns.

Alvarado Hospital will have a designated survival station set up in the hospital cafeteria. The station will offer free snacks and smoking cessation aids supplied by the American Cancer Society. In addition all babies born Thursday at the hospital will receive a T-shirt that says, "I'm born a non-smoker."

"We hope smokers will take this opportunity to quit smoking and encourage others not to start, especially teenagers," said Anne Grahek, R.N., Cancer Care Coordinator at Alvarado Hospital. "By helping young people resist starting to smoke in the first place, we hope that future generations will not have to struggle to break an addiction to nicotine."

FPA Medical Management will have a booth at Parkway Plaza and will provide brochures and other information to those who wish to quit smoking. Also, interested individuals can stop by any FPA Healthcare Center between Monday and Friday for the materials.

East County locations are as follows:

- Santee: 10158 Buena Vista, 9225 Carlton Hills Blvd., 8760 Cuyamaca, #101;

- La Mesa: 5565 Grossmont Center Dr., Bldg. #3, Suite 353, 5525 Grossmont Center Dr., #601, 8881 Fletcher Parkway, #102;

- El Cajon: 860 Jamacha Road, #203-210, #103 or #109.

The American Cancer Society estimates that in 1996, over 17,000 lives in California will be lost to cancer because of tobacco use. A University of Michigan study released last year showed smoking among teens has increased to the highest level in 16 years.

That is why the Cancer Society is also sponsoring the "Great American SmokeScream," a week of activities culminating in a one-day, in-school event to promote prevention of teenage smoking.

More than one million kids will start smoking this year, according to the society. One-third of them will die from their addiction.

The Center for Disease Control reports that between 1991 and 1995, the proportion of high-school students who smoked increased from one-quarter to one-third. Today, nearly 40 percent of white high school females smoke and 44 percent of white high school males use tobacco (cigarettes and spit tobacco). Smoking is now increasing among young black males, with rates doubling between 1991 and 1995, going from 14.1 percent to 27.8 percent.

In addition, a National Cancer Institute study found that teens are twice as likely to be influenced by cigarette advertising than by peer pressure. The study showed, in fact, that this advertising causes kids to start smoking.

Eighty-six percent of children who smoke prefer Marlboro, Camel and Newport, the three most heavily advertised brands. After the Joe Camel cartoon was introduced, Camel's market share among underage smokers jumped from 0.5 percent to 32.8 percent.

The theme of the Great American SmokeScream is "You Smoke You Choke." Teachers and principals are incorporating tobacco education messages into morning announcements and school curriculum this week. On Nov. 21, kids across the nation will gather in their schools to scream out in unison against smoking.

Incumbents win most elections, pro-l

by Steven Saint

East County has been abuzz with elections, with some 130 candidates running in 24 races. About 150,000 voters went to the polls to elect representatives from the 52nd Congressional District (comprising 269,611 registered voters from La Mesa to the Imperial County line) on down to the Lakeside Water District's Division 3 (with 2,204 voters).

Incumbency, as usual, was a key to winning. Endorsement by pro-life organizations — a seemingly important factor in the 1992 and 1994 elections — did not play as clear a role this year.

East County voter turnout matched the county average and was generally higher than in 1994, with about 64 percent of the registered voters making it to the polls. Turnout was lowest in the Helix Water District's Division 5 (the El Cajon seat) with 60 percent. Other water boards, Padre Dam's Division 4 (Lakeside seat) and Otay's Division 4 drew 62 and 63 percent of the voters, respectively.

Some water boards, on the other hand, drew very well. The highest voter participation in East County was in Otay's Division 5, where 72 percent of the 13,219 voters cast ballots. Padre Dam's Division 2 (Santee) drew 67 percent.

But even a relatively low-turnout race, like the 77th Assembly District (with just under 63 percent participation), was of greater interest this year than in 1994. The heated Tom Connolly-Steve Baldwin contest drew less than 55 percent of the voters two years ago.

The increase in voter turnout brought with it greater rejection of all candidates. This "none of the above" factor (labeled by county election officials as the "undervote") comes from voters who go to the polls but do not cast votes in every race. Perhaps they vote for president on one state propositions, but skip a school or water board race.

The None of the Above factor can be calculated in any race where voters must choose only one candidate. The votes for all candidates are added up and then subtracted from the total number of votes cast in the district.

For instance, in the 52nd Congressional District, the election returns as of Nov. 13 look like this:

Duncan Hunter	101,382	67.00%
Darity Wesley	42,958	28.39
Janice Jordan	2,895	1.91
Dante Ridley	2,832	1.87
Peter Ballantyne	1,241	.82

Now, 173,452 people voted in the district, but the total for all candidates equals only 151,308. Some 22,144 people — 12.8 percent — didn't vote for anybody for Congress.

Factoring those people back into the mathematics, the results look like this:

Duncan Hunter	101,382	58.4%
Darity Wesley	42,958	24.7
Janice Jordan	2,895	1.7
Dante Ridley	2,832	1.6
Peter Ballantyne	1,241	.07
NOTA	22,144	12.8

Doctor outlines tips for better handling of cholesterol

Cholesterol, and its link to heart disease, has garnered significant media attention during the past decade. Still, many Americans are confused about "good" and "bad" cholesterol and what it all means in relation to their lifestyle and prospects for a long and healthy life.

"The fact that almost one-third of Americans still need to lower their blood cholesterol level is particularly distressing," said Terry Winegar, M.D., a family practice physician with Encompass Family Physicians Medical Group El Cajon, an affiliate of the UCSD Healthcare Network. "In most cases, it is simply a matter of changing one's diet, getting some exercise and maintaining a healthy body weight."

High cholesterol levels, high blood pressure, smoking and hereditary predisposition are the leading risk factors associated with heart disease, which remains the leading cause of death for American adults.

"As cholesterol levels increase, so does the risk for coronary heart disease," Dr. Winegar said.

Cholesterol, a substance that is made naturally in our bodies, is an essential part of every cell. Dietary cholesterol, which is found in some of the foods we eat, is absorbed in the liver and carried through the bloodstream.

Too much dietary cholesterol is not only unnecessary, it is unhealthy.

"It is important to understand that there are two types of cholesterol—good cholesterol and bad. HDL (high density lipoproteins) is good because it carries cholesterol out of the bloodstream," Winegar said. "Therefore, higher levels of HDL are desirable. Bad cholesterol, LDL (low density lipoproteins), has a thinner protein coating and deposits itself on the walls of arteries, causing a build-up. It is the level of LDL in the blood that causes concern."

A simple blood test can determine levels of cholesterol in the bloodstream. Winegar recommends having the blood test done at your doctor's office. Blood tests are generally more accurate than finger-prick tests, which are often available at health fairs and shopping malls.

"Furthermore, your physician can review the test results with you and may set a goal for your LDL-cholesterol level based on your risk for heart disease," he said. "Unlike the finger-prick test, the blood test will indicate separate scores for HDL and LDL levels."

Although heart disease can be hereditary, according to Winegar, one of the best ways to reduce blood cholesterol levels is through diet. Cholesterol is found in foods derived from animals, including eggs, dairy products and meat.

To lower cholesterol intake, avoid foods high in saturated fats such as butter, cheese, whole milk, ice cream, coconut oil and fatty meats. Instead, choose low-fat dairy products, olive-oil, fish and lean cuts of meat. In addition, an increase in plant foods such as grains, fruits, vegetables and beans can significantly lower cholesterol intake.

Simple changes in diet can make a big difference. For example, one cup of whole milk has approximately 34 mg. of cholesterol and 8.2 grams of fat, as opposed to one cup of 1 percent milk, which has 18 mg. of cholesterol and 4.7 grams of fat.

Likewise, substituting yogurt for sour cream in recipes will cut cholesterol and fat in half. Also, taking the skin off chicken can cut fat intake by two-thirds.

In addition to diet, exercise is an important component of a heart-healthy lifestyle. Physical activity helps control weight, lower blood pressure and increase HDL levels.

"Anyone can develop high cholesterol levels, regardless of age, sex or race," said Winegar. "The good news is that everyone can take these simple measures to control their cholesterol levels."

IOF offers child protection tips

More than 800,000 children in the United States were reported missing in 1995. As a public service, the IOF Foresters is offering a free brochure on ways you can protect your child. To receive a free brochure call 1-800-922-4-IOF and ask for "10 Child Protection Tips."

To help keep your child safe, IOF Foresters suggests the following:

- Never display your child's name on his or her clothing. Someone could approach your child and use the name to make him or her feel more secure.

- Have your child memorize his or her full name, address, your place of work and telephone numbers.

- Teach your child how to use the telephone.

A fraternal benefit society with more than one million members, the IOF Foresters is dedicated to helping families through such programs as free fingerprinting for children, care for needy hospitalized kids through the Children's Miracle Network, and child abuse prevention programs.

The IOF Foresters (<http://www.iof.org>) also provides family protection through fraternal benefits and financial services including life insurance and related products.

fe endorsements get mixed results

The highest None of the Above factor was found in the Grossmont Hospital District short-term election (voters could vote for three in the long-term election, which makes under-vote impossible to calculate), with 37 percent picking neither Armand Wohl nor William Pogue. Wohl won with only 35 percent of the vote.

About a third of the voters did not cast votes in the Grossmont-Cuyamaca Community College Board races, with 35 percent None of the Above in Seat 4 (Timothy Caruthers winning) and 31 percent in Seat 3 (Ronald Kraft winning). Again, more voters preferred None of the Above than Caruthers, who received only 30.5 percent of the vote.

The Helix Water race, which had 60 percent turnout, also had 27 percent None of the Above, followed by the Santee School Board races, with 25.5 percent None of the Above in Seat 4 (Cathy Abel winning) and 23.5 percent in Seat 2 (Dianne El-Hajj winning).

Ironically, voters in the district with the highest voter participation — Otay Water Division 5 — showed the greatest indifference, with 25 percent of the voters choosing to punch neither candidate.

The lowest percentage of None-of-the-Above voters occurred in the 77th Assembly District race, where only 5.5 percent of the voters shunned the candidates.

Of the 54 candidates elected, 36 were incumbents. Only 18 will be new to office, either challengers or candidates for seats vacated by incumbents. Only six governmental bodies had incumbents who did not seek re-election, most notably the Santee City Council, Lemon Grove School Board and two divisions of the Padre Dam Municipal Water District.

Incumbents won in all partisan races and in the three city council elections: El Cajon, La Mesa and Santee (where Jack Dale won a second term; the council had an open seat as Councilman Jim Romine challenged Dale). Incumbents were also returned to elementary school boards (La Mesa-Spring Valley, Cajon Valley, Santee and Lakeside).

Only 10 incumbents lost their bids for re-election, most notably Victor Calderon of the Grossmont-Cuyamaca Community College Board, Ada Reep of the Grossmont Union High School Board, George Hurst of the Grossmont Hospital Board and Bob Cederdahl of the San Miguel Fire Board.

The greatest concentration of ousted incumbents was in Lakeside, where Michelle Braun and David Reckling lost the Planning Group election. Susan Manire lost her Fire Protection District seat and Mary Allison and Robert Kleinschmidt lost water board elections.

Two years ago, most of the victorious challengers were associated with pro-life organizations, their names appearing on endorsement slates promulgated by the California Pro-Life Council, Southern Californians for Life and the Southern California Christian Times. This year, only half the winning challengers were so endorsed.

Nadia Davies was the top vote-getter in the Grossmont Union High School District race, endorsed by pro-life organizations. Incumbent Michael Harrelson, however, retained his seat without a pro-life endorsement. Bruce Johnson, also endorsed by the Pro-Life Council, did not win.

Caruthers beat Calderon by some 1,300 votes (less than a tenth of a percent), but both candidates were endorsed by the Pro-Life Council. Caruthers alone received the endorsement of Southern Californians for Life, a group which uses the 1994 post office box of the San Diego County Taxpayers Coalition.

Dick Bea, the registered nurse who beat out George Hurst for a Grossmont Hospital seat, was endorsed by Southern Californians for Life but not by the Pro-Life Council. Randy Voepel, running for the Santee City Council open seat, was the only candidate with pro-life endorsements.

While nine candidates may have profited from slate endorsements, nine other challengers won with them. Further, 11 candidates with pro-life endorsements lost their races, including Jim Romine (Santee mayoral candidate), Dick Campbell (El Cajon City Council), Gary Cass (La Mesa-Spring Valley School Board) and Ernie Pero (Lemon Grove School Board).

Calderon and San Miguel Fire Board stalwart Bob Cederdahl were the only incumbents with pro-life endorsements to lose elections.

FRIENDS OF THE LEMON GROVE LIBRARY NEWSLETTER

FRIENDLY PERSEVERANCE

Thank you, Lemon Grove; we almost did it! Library supporters in Lemon Grove gave us 62% YES on Proposition A. We needed 66.7% countywide.

We may be down, but we are not defeated. We learned a lot, and I can guarantee that we'll all be ready two years from now to put our issue on the ballot again.

We all knew it wouldn't be easy, but we gained a world of experience during our first try, and we have two years to regroup. We are not going away-- we will win.

Rosemary Putnam

WE CALLED IT PROPOSITION A

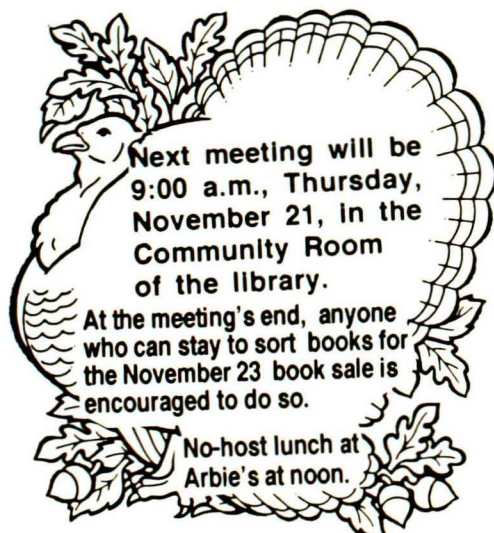

I'm inclined to think well of people. I've lived in Southern California all my adult life, most of it in San Diego County, twenty years of it in Lemon Grove. I like my neighbors and friends here, the friendly folk all over town, the spirit that is improving our city in visible ways.

Now I find myself walking down the street, looking at passers-by, wondering which ones didn't understand what a good thing we could do by okaying for five years a small tax that would sustain our libraries for years. How could we not have approved something that would be of so much benefit to us?

We who love and use the county's libraries must not have talked enough, explained enough. It's a well-known fact that we library-users are a quiet lot; we don't like to shout or impose our opinions on others. We must ask again for the county's voters to think about the needs of our libraries, the many people who use them, and, finally, our own self-interest in providing well-equipped centers of knowledge throughout our county. They need to be convenient, make computer-literacy available to everyone, and to be open during the hours that students and working people need them.

I still love San Diego, Lemon Grove, my friends and neighbors, but who was it who didn't understand about Prop. A? We need to talk.

Mary Vinson

NOVEMBER 23 BOOK SALE

November 23, the Saturday before Thanksgiving. Friends of the Library will present another Inside/ Outside Book Sale, 9:00 a.m. - 3:00 p.m., with many books on outside tables and even more books displayed on tables and shelves in the Community Room.

Prices are 25c for paperbacks, 50c for hardbound, 10c for magazines and romances. There is a small selection of special books that will go for higher prices.

Come in early in the month to donate books; return on the 23rd to buy some more. Say hello and thanks to those hard-working Friends who will be there donating their day in order to help the library. Better yet, JOIN the Friends of the Lemon Grove Library. A single membership is $7.50 per year, an entire family is only $10.00. What a good way to show your support!

Join now and you get the remainder of 1996 plus all of 1997. It's a membership bargain.

"Nathan's Run"

by John Gilstrap

Action in this thriller begins with the savage killing of a guard in a juvenile detention facility. A 12-year-old boy is accused of the crime and branded a cop-killer. He escapes after the killing and is pursued by the police. Orphaned and alone, the boy has nobody to turn to for help but must rely on himself as he tries to elude the police. An unlikely source of comfort to the child is his telephone conversations with the host of a radio talk show, whose audience is divided into those who think the boy innocent and those who want to see him picked up immediately and the death penalty imposed.

A contract killer moves quietly through the story, slipping with snakelike silence through its pages. The action is non-stop. Only in the final pages, as the story reaches its surprising conclusion, do the authorities recognize that there is more to this case than they suspected.

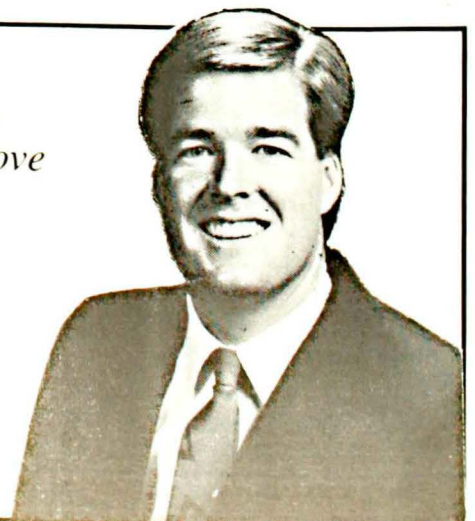

We are looking for book donations for our Nov. 23 book sale!
